Fishers ask Aussie PM to stop oil exploration

Manila — Australian Prime Minister John Howard has been asked to stop oil exploration in the Timor Sea, a move that would protect the environment and the livelihood of the fishers who depend on the sea.

The request was made by a group of fishers and environmentalists who are concerned about the impact of oil exploration on the marine ecosystem. They argue that the exploration could lead to oil spills and other environmental damage that would harm the fish and the people who rely on them for their livelihood.

The group is calling on Howard to take immediate action to stop oil exploration in the Timor Sea. They believe that the government should prioritize the protection of the environment and the livelihood of the fishers over the interests of the oil industry.

The group is also calling on the Australian people to support their demand for Howard to stop oil exploration. They believe that the people of Australia should be aware of the impact of oil exploration on the environment and the livelihood of the fishers, and they should pressure their government to take action.

The group is holding a series of protests and rallies in Australia to draw attention to their cause. They are also using social media and other communication tools to spread their message and to organize their protests.

The group is confident that they will succeed in their demand for Howard to stop oil exploration. They believe that the Australian people will support them, and they will pressure their government to take action.

The group is also calling on the Australian government to conduct a thorough environmental impact study of the Timor Sea before any oil exploration is allowed. They believe that this study should take into account the impact of oil exploration on the environment and the livelihood of the fishers.

Green energy opens doors for power cooperatives

By The Seattle Staff

A new generation of power cooperatives is being formed in the Pacific Northwest. These cooperatives are being formed to provide a more efficient and cost-effective way of generating and distributing power. The cooperatives are being formed by local residents who are interested in owning a share of the power they use. This is a new concept in the power industry, and it is expected to lead to a more decentralized and democratic system of power distribution.

Figure 1 consists of two panels, (a) and (b), each showing a scatter plot of the number of correct responses (Y-axis) versus the number of trials (X-axis). Panel (a) is for the 'Correct' condition, and panel (b) is for the 'Incorrect' condition. Both panels show a positive linear relationship between the number of trials and the number of correct responses. The data points are represented by open circles, and a solid line represents the linear regression fit. The X-axis for both panels ranges from 0 to 10, and the Y-axis ranges from 0 to 10. In panel (a), the data points are clustered around the line y=x. In panel (b), the data points are clustered around the line y=0.5x.

Las Vegas aims higher—much higher

By David J. Phillips, Las Vegas Review-Journal

The city of Las Vegas is looking to become a global hub for business and industry, not just a destination for tourists and gamblers. The city's new master plan, unveiled last week, calls for a major expansion of the city's infrastructure, including a new airport, a new port, and a new highway system. The plan also calls for a major expansion of the city's education system, including a new university and a new community college. The plan is a bold vision for the future of Las Vegas, and it is one that the city's leaders are committed to making a reality.

The city's new master plan, unveiled last week, calls for a major expansion of the city's infrastructure, including a new airport, a new port, and a new highway system. The plan also calls for a major expansion of the city's education system, including a new university and a new community college. The plan is a bold vision for the future of Las Vegas, and it is one that the city's leaders are committed to making a reality.

The first part of the paper is devoted to the study of the asymptotic behavior of the solutions of the system (1.1) as $t \rightarrow \infty$. It is shown that the solutions of the system (1.1) are bounded and tend to zero as $t \rightarrow \infty$. The second part of the paper is devoted to the study of the asymptotic behavior of the solutions of the system (1.1) as $t \rightarrow 0$. It is shown that the solutions of the system (1.1) are bounded and tend to zero as $t \rightarrow 0$.
